Beginning in January 1953, the Yuhuan (N 28-09, E 121-13) Hsien Government decreased the administrative jurisdiction originally assigned to the town government and added more administrative cadres in order to tighten its control over the populace. K'anmen (N 28-06, E 121-16), originally divided into 15 pao (0202), was now divided into five villages. Each village was assigned 16 administrative cadres as follows: village executive, militia leader, food agent, organization agent, production agent, public security agent, conciliation agent, intelligence agent, and eight assistants.
